Description: The mission of the Department of Pharmaceutical Sciences is to make scholarly contributions to the discipline of pharmaceutical sciences and related fields. Education within the department offers a high quality learning environment that includes Ph.D. and Pharm.D./Ph.D. degree programs. Although not required for entry into pharmacy practice, a one-year residency is offered and affords the Pharm.D. graduate an opportunity to develop expertise in clinical pharmacy practice and specialty areas. The graduate program leading to the Ph.D. degree in pharmaceutical sciences is designed for students seeking teaching and research careers in academic institutions, the pharmaceutical industry and other health-related agencies. An interdisciplinary approach prepares graduates to perform independent research, to encourage scholarly development and to acquire teaching skills. Areas of specialization include pharmacology, pharmaceuticals, toxicology, and medicinal chemistry. The Doctor of Pharmacy (Pharm.D.)/Doctor of Philosophy (Ph.D.) Degree Program enables highly qualified students to obtain both degrees in a shortened period of time. This Pharm.D./Ph.D. Degree program is designed primarily for students who are strongly motivated toward an academic/ research career in the pharmaceutical sciences. The Program is flexible enough to accommodate individuals of varied educational backgrounds.
