Description: THIS RESOURCE IS NO LONGER IN SERVICE, documented on July 16, 2013. A free surgical encyclopedia for surgeons and their patients. Contributions in the form of new articles and editing can be made by anyone at anytime anywhere in the world. With over 33,000 articles for surgeons and patients, including news, articles, operation scripts, biographies and images. The website is a "wiki" which allows for the collaborative editing and building of content. Contributions in the form of new articles and editing can be made by those who register on the site, confirm their email address and whose application is accepted by an administrator. Wikisurgery is more than just a depot of surgical knowledge, not just articles about facts but also articles about controversy, debates, with none of the usual editorial limits on space. Indeed we hope it will become a record of surgical thought, experience and progression. Key Topics: Operation Scripts, Basic Surgical Skills Training Program, Basic Laparoscopic Training Program, Operative Images, Patient Information; there is also a Featured Videos section.
