Description: THIS RESOURCE IS NO LONGER IN SERVICE, documented August 24, 2017.

Platform to enable dissemination of scientific findings, foster open peer commentary and promote collaboration among the research community. Widespread participation in OneLab will increase the quality, transparency and reproducibility of data thus accelerating the pace of scientific discoveries. The result will be a streamlined process from the bench to the clinic with tremendous benefits for the well-being of the general public. OneLab is a private professional network that mirrors the hierarchy of real world research laboratories. Users are designated as either principal investigators (PI) or lab members. PIs can invite lab members to join and data posted by lab members cannot be shared without PI approval. In this way the PI retains FULL CONTROL over the dissemination of scientific content thus safeguarding the primacy of authorship. This professional network will serve as a backdrop for sharing scientific findings, promote collaborations, and provide a basis for open peer commentary. Semantic Search of Structured Content OneLab implements a powerful search functionality that is based on structured content. Users describe their Single Figure Posts (SFPs) using defined fields such as model organism, genes, proteins and assay. This additional layer of structure provides the basis for a smarter and more accurate search engine that understands searcher intent and therefore generates more relevant results. Structured content allows OneLab to go one step further by offering recommendations based on similarities that might not be intuitive, thus increasing potential collaborations among scientists., THIS RESOURCE IS NO LONGER IN SERVICE.
