Description: Wardwiki is a wiki designed to give free advice to foundation doctors (also know as interns) to help with practical issues as they arise on hospital wards. Despite the proliferation of medical websites and expensive courses there remains a large gap in provision of practical, experience based guidance to help foundation doctors survive the first two years on the wards. You may search for topics of interest but there are also sections including Popular Topics, Popular Categories, Top 25 articles, and Featured article. It is the responsibility of each foundation doctor to ensure their actions, referrals and prescriptions are accurate. These pages are written and maintained to the best ability of the contributing authors. We encourage any contributions be well founded, accurate, in good faith, without endorsement of medical products or opinions, and not to breach existing copyright. WardWiki cannot accept liability for adverse events that may arise directly or indirectly from advice given.
