Description: The SciLogs combine the strengths of both science culture and the medium blog. They provide scientists and lay people with the opportunity to interact in interdisciplinary discussions about science in all its facets: research, applications, ethics, values, politics etc. Good Science is transparent and provides us with new knowledge about the world and ourselves. As an important part of our culture and society, science is never isolated. Informing about new results and recent developments as well as the dialogue with the public are characteristics of good science. Good blogs are personalized, authentic and active. Oftentimes, they provide unique perspectives. Blog posts are serious invitations for dialogue, readers are potential partners, invited to comment and ask the bloggers questions. The SciLogs are not a closed community. Every user is invited to comment, and new bloggers are welcome, too. Please submit your blog or blog idea to blog@scilogs.de - and we will check if we fit together.
