Description: The Windber Research Institute (WRI) is the combination of: Biomedical Research Programs, the Center for Health Promotion and Disease and strategic partnerships. By embracing these three entities as one, WRI is in a prominent position to impact health, as the world knows it today. Through pioneering research and programs that focus on breast cancer, gynecological disease, cardiovascular disease, health promotion and disease prevention, WRI is in a position to play a fundamental role in the future health and well-being of people all over the world. Windber Research Institute and its Center for Health Promotion and Disease Prevention and strategic regional, national, and international research and clinical partnerships is committed to discovering personal molecular diagnostic and prognostic biomarkers and developing innovative advanced disease prevention measures that will lead to decreased disease, early diagnosis, and individualized approaches to treatments and education for patients and their families in the world community. Windber Research Institute is built on the foundation of professional ethics and strong moral values which foster an environment of cooperation, open communication, integrity, dedication, self motivation, teamwork, excellence, and mutual respect. WRI's welcoming and culturally diverse environment excels through interdisciplinary collaborations. Our pursuit of excellence is driven by the recognition of our patients and their valuable contributions to the research.
